

Is Your Baby a Cria?

By Anya C S [Own work] via Wikimedia Commons

An owlet is a baby owl.

Purplezakura [Own work] via Wikimedia Commons

A foal is a baby horse.

Hassan Houari via Wikimedia Commons

A joey is a baby koala.

Is Your Baby a Cria?

By Judy Gallagher via Wikimedia Commons

A cub is a baby fox.

Pinydiscus (Own work) via Wikimedia Commons

A kid is a baby goat.

robderuiter (Own work) via Wikimedia Commons

A cria is a baby llama.

Is Your Baby a Cria?

By Aya C S (Own work) via Wikimedia Commons

Is your baby an owl?
Then you are an owl.

Purpleakura (Own work) via Wikimedia Commons

Is your baby a foal?
Then you are a horse.

Hassan Houari via Wikimedia Commons

Is your baby a joey?
Then you are a koala.

Is Your Baby a Cria?

By Judy Gallagher via Wikimedia Commons

Is your baby a cub?
Then you are a fox.

Phoydiscus (Own work) via Wikimedia Commons

Is your baby a kid?
Then you are a goat.

robdenriter (Own work) via Wikimedia Commons

Is your baby a cria?
Then you are a llama.

Is Your Baby a Cria?

Animal babies have different names. Some animals have specific baby names. Some share baby names.

rabdenulfier (Own work) via Wikimedia Commons

There are many animals with specific baby names. A baby llama is called a cria.

Pinoydiscus (Own work) via Wikimedia Commons

A baby goat is called a kid.

By Anya C.S (Own work) via Wikimedia Commons

A baby owl is called an owlet.

Is Your Baby a Cria?

Purplestakura (Own work) via Wikimedia Commons

Some animals share baby names. A baby horse is a foal. A baby donkey is also called a foal. So is a baby zebra.

Hassan Hourzi via Wikimedia Commons

A baby koala is called a joey. A baby kangaroo is also called a joey. So is a baby opossum.

By Judy Gallagher via Wikimedia Commons

A baby fox is called a cub. Wolf babies are called cubs. So are baby bears.

